If you're reading this, thank you. I'm a student currently studying at San Jose State University in the digital media art program. My work focuses on designing applications and media that benefit and inspire the users. If you've read my resume you'll notice I have a pretty broad skillset. I can do a wide number of tasks but I must confess I don't specialize in one particular. What I can say I specialize in however, is learning new skills and techniques.

I'm comfortable and efficient working in groups and as an individual. My honesty is reflected in my work. When I don't know something I make sure to ask questions and put extra effort into figuring out what is needed and exceed expectations. I believe my experience in art, design and programming makes me a suitable candidate for associate instructional design. Key skills I have which would benefit include:

- Years of experience working with a majority of the Adobe Creative Suite (Illustrator, Photoshop, Premiere etc.)
- Experience in illustration: I can visualize concepts in an ideal manner
- Experience in teams and working with partners.
- Understanding of digital media platforms

My passion is create things that others will enjoy and use. I've never turn down an opportunity in which I could impact others in a positive way. As a student who's hungry for experience, I am confident I can accomplish what needs to be done.

Thank you for reading my letter,
Sincerely,

Rodney Truong
